INTRODUCTION

- As the largest archipelago country in the world, the management of Indonesia’s marine and coastal territory has not been comprehensively done.
- Marine and coastal area has not been administered more carefully.
- Traditional management system is still functioning, in other it is to be growing weaker or has disappeared entirely.
- One obstacle to maintenance and development of effective management customary institution in Indonesia is that the government does not fully recognize or support such institutions.
- Is it possible to be integrated of institution schemes between traditional and modern government structure?
METHODOLOGY

- Institutional Analysis:
  - Study of modern and traditional institutional;
  - Designing Integrated Institutional Schemes;
  - Integration of modern government structure that is embedded in particular traditional government structure;

MODERN STRUCTURE

INTEGRATED STRUCTURE

Traditional structures
Combination of traditional and modern structures
Modern structures
RESULT

• Custom areas could be protected effectively by traditional institution for sustainability development.
• To maintain Unity of Republic of Indonesia, modern government structure should be recognized by the whole people of Indonesia.
• Integrated structure contributed to local institutional sustainability

FUTURE WORK

• Formalization of CMT as component in a National Marine Policy.
• Development of the co-management as a collective responsibility.
• Development of National Marine Administration System based on CMT and Customary Marine Administration System
